

World Bank Insider Blows Whistle on Corruption, Federal Reserve

A former insider at the World Bank, ex-Senior Counsel Karen Hudes, says the global financial system is dominated by a small group of corrupt, power-hungry figures centered around the privately owned U.S. Federal Reserve. The network has seized control of the media to cover up its crimes, too, she explained. In an interview with The New American, Hudes said that when she tried to blow the whistle on multiple problems at the World Bank, she was fired for her efforts. Now, along with a network of fellow whistleblowers, Hudes is determined to expose and end the corruption. And she is confident of success.

Citing an explosive 2011 Swiss study published in the PLOS ONE journal on the “network of global corporate control,” Hudes pointed out that a small group of entities – mostly financial institutions and especially central banks – exert a massive amount of influence over the international economy from behind the scenes. “What is really going on is that the world’s resources are being dominated by this group,” she explained, adding that the “corrupt power grabbers” have managed to dominate the media as well. “They’re being allowed to do it.”

According to the peer-reviewed paper, which presented the first global investigation of ownership architecture in the international economy, transnational corporations form a “giant bow-tie structure.” A large portion of control, meanwhile, “flows to a small tightly-knit core of financial institutions.” The researchers described the core as an “economic ‘super-entity’” that raises important issues for policymakers and researchers. Of course, the implications are enormous for citizens as well.

Hudes, an attorney who spent some two decades working in the World Bank’s legal department, has observed the machinations of the network up close. “I realized we were now dealing with something known as state capture, which is where the institutions of government are co-opted by the group that’s corrupt,” she told The New American in a phone interview. “The pillars of the U.S. government – some of them – are dysfunctional because of state capture; this is a big story, this is a big cover up.”

At the heart of the network, Hudes said, are 147 financial institutions and central banks – especially the Federal Reserve, which was created by Congress but is owned by essentially a cartel of private banks. “This is a story about how the international financial system was secretly gamed, mostly by central banks – they’re the ones we are talking about,” she explained. “The central bankers have been gaming the system. I would say that this is a power grab.”

The Fed in particular is at the very center of the network and the coverup, Hudes continued, citing a policy and oversight body that includes top government and Fed officials. Central bankers have also been manipulating gold prices, she added, echoing widespread concerns that The New American has documented extensively. Indeed, even the inaccurate World Bank financial statements that Hudes has been trying to expose are linked to the U.S. central bank, she said.

"The group that we're talking about from the Zurich study — that's the Federal Reserve; it has some other pieces to it, but that's the Federal Reserve," Hudes explained. "So the Federal Reserve secretly dominated the world economy using secret, interlocking corporate directorates, and terrorizing anybody who managed to figure out that they were having any kind of role, and putting people in very important positions so that they could get a free pass."

The shadowy but immensely powerful Bank for International Settlements serves as "the club of these private central bankers," Hudes continued. "Now, are people going to want interest on their country's debts to continue to be paid to that group when they find out the secret tricks that that group has been doing? Don't forget how they've enriched themselves extraordinarily and how they've taken taxpayer money for the bailout."

As far as intervening in the gold price, Hudes said it was an effort by the powerful network and its central banks to "hold onto its paper currency" — a suspicion shared by many analysts and even senior government officials. The World Bank whistleblower also said that contrary to official claims, she did not believe there was any gold being held in Fort Knox. Even congressmen and foreign governments have tried to find out if the precious metals were still there, but they met with little success. Hudes, however, believes the scam will eventually come undone.

"This is like crooks trying to figure out where they can go hide. It's a mafia," she said. "These culprits that have grabbed all this economic power have succeeded in infiltrating both sides of the issue, so you will find people who are supposedly trying to fight corruption who are just there to spread disinformation and as a placeholder to trip up anybody who manages to get their act together.... Those thugs think that if they can keep the world ignorant, they can bleed it longer."

Of course, the major corruption at the highest levels of government and business is not a new phenomenon. Georgetown University historian and Professor Carroll Quigley, who served as President Bill Clinton's mentor, for example, wrote about the scheme in his 1966 book Tragedy And Hope: A History Of The World In Our Time. The heavyweight academic, who was allowed to review documents belonging to the top echelons of the global establishment, even explained how the corrupt system would work — remarkably similar to what Hudes describes.

"The powers of financial capitalism had a far-reaching aim, nothing less than to create a world system of financial control in private hands able to dominate the political system of each country and the economy of the world as a whole," wrote Prof. Quigley, who agreed with the goals but not the secrecy. "This system was to be controlled in a feudalist fashion by the central banks of the world acting in concert by secret agreements arrived at in frequent private meetings and conferences. The apex of the system was to be the Bank for International Settlements in Basel, Switzerland, a private bank owned and controlled by the world's central banks which were themselves private corporations."

But it is not going to happen, Hudes said — at least not if she has something to do with it. While the media are dominated by the “power grabber” network, Hudes has been working with foreign governments, reporters, U.S. officials, state governments, and a broad coalition of fellow whistleblowers to blow the entire scam wide open. There has been quite a bit of interest, too, particularly among foreign governments and state officials in the United States.

Citing the wisdom of America’s Founding Fathers in creating a federal system of government with multiple layers of checks and balances, Hudes said she was confident that the network would eventually be exposed and subjected to the rule of law, stopping the secret corruption. If and when that happens — even if it may be disorderly — Hudes says precious metals will once again play a role in imposing discipline on the monetary system. The rule of law would also be restored, she said, and the public will demand a proper press to stay informed.

“We’re going to have a cleaned-up financial system, that’s where it is going, but in the meantime, people who didn’t know how the system was gamed are going to find out,” she said. “We’re going to have a different kind of international financial system.... It’ll be a new kind of world where people know what’s going on — no more backroom deals; that’s not going to keep happening. We’re going to have a different kind of media if people don’t want to be dominated and controlled, which I don’t think they do.”

While Hudes sounded upbeat, she recognizes that the world is facing serious danger right now — there are even plans in place to impose martial law in the United States, she said. The next steps will be critical for humanity. As such, Hudes argues, it is crucial that the people of the world find out about the lawlessness, corruption, and thievery that are going on at the highest levels — and put a stop to it once and for all. The consequences of inaction would be disastrous.

The Federal Reserve Swindle

The United States - a country that is made of debt and that will be destroyed by it. You thought the United States has been an independent country since 1776?

Wrong!

It may once have been independent, but since 1913 it has in reality been shackled to the Federal Reserve System, established on Christmas Eve of that year when most senators and congressmen had left for home for the Christmas holiday (see below). But at least the Federal Reserve is owned by the US Government, right?

Wrong!

The Federal Reserve is owned by a coterie of private bankers - and they aren't even American!

Here is a list of the ten primary stockholders in the Federal Reserve System:

Rothschilds of London

Rothschilds of Berlin

Lazard Brothers of Paris

Israel Seiff, who resides in Italy

Kuhn, Loeb and Company of Germany (their US branch financed Lenin and Trotsky in their seizure of power for the Bolsheviks in Russia in 1917)

Warburgs of Amsterdam

Warburgs of Hamburg

Lehman Brothers of New York (now they've gone bankrupt their shares will probably be taken up by Goldman Sachs or the Rockefellers - see below)

Goldman Sachs of New York

Rockefellers of New York

It's time for Americans to wake up and take back their money from these interlopers!

The following is taken from a web site devoted to exposing the fraudulent nature of the American banking system. A link will be placed to it as soon as possible. My own comments are in [square brackets] and the figures have been suitable updated.

In the spring of 2008, the US National Debt was officially $9 trillion. In reality it was probably over $30 trillion, and you can add at least another couple of trillion to bring us up to October 2008 (bailing out several bankrupt banks is costly). A trillion is a thousand billion. A billion minutes ago takes us back to about 105 AD. A billion hours ago our ancestors were living in the Stone Age [112,148 BC]. A billion dollars ago was only 8 hours and 20 minutes at the rate the US government is spending it [and that's before the September/October 2008 Wall Street bailouts]. George W Bush has increased the US National Debt by 46% in 5 years [March 2006] and spent more than all previous US administrations up to 1980. The US owes more than it is possible to ever pay through taxes. No-one can comprehend the amount.

The wealth gap that has opened up like a yawning chasm between rich and poor in America originated with the class-based policies of the Fed. The massive equity bubbles which arose from artificially low interest rates and the deliberate destruction of the dollar by reckless increases in the money supply have shifted trillions of dollars from working class Americans to the predatory aristocrats at the top of the economic food chain. The gulf between rich and poor has grown so wide that it now poses a direct threat to our increasingly fragile democracy. That's why Thomas Jefferson said:

If the American people ever allow private banks to control the issue of our currency, first by inflation, then by deflation, the banks and the corporations that will grow up will deprive the people of all property until their children wake up homeless on the continent their fathers conquered. The issuing of money should be taken from the banks and restored to the people, to whom it properly belongs.

Free people cannot control their own destiny unless they control their own currency. The Federal Reserve must be abolished. "Central banks can issue currency [i.e., create money out of nothing], a non-interest-bearing claim on the government, effectively without limit. They can discount loans and other assets of banks or other private depository institutions, thereby converting potentially illiquid private assets into riskless claims on the government in the form of deposits at the central bank.

[When he speaks of "discounting loans," he is talking about loans that may be in default, e.g., the borrower may be broke and the loan may be worthless. In this case, the Fed may purchase the loan for less than its face value, i.e., "discount" it, and pay for it, again, with money that the Fed creates. Further, the Fed may create money, in Mr. Greenspan's words, "without limit." The "other assets" may be anything, e.g., real estate that a bank has purchased].

That all of these claims on government are readily accepted reflects the fact that a government cannot become insolvent with respect to obligations in its own currency. A fiat money system, like the ones we have today, can produce such claims [dollars] without limit. [i.e., create an unlimited amount of money out of nothing. It is significant that Mr. Greenspan repeats over and over that the Fed may create money without limit.] To be sure, if a central bank produces too many [i.e., if it creates too much money], inflation will inexorably rise as will interest rates, and economic activity will inevitably be constrained by the misallocation of resources induced by inflation. If it produces too few, the economy's expansion also will presumably be constrained by a shortage of the necessary lubricant for transactions. Authorities must struggle continuously to find the proper balance."

Extract from a speech given by Alan Greenspan, former Chairman of the Federal Reserve, at the Catholic University, Leuven, Belgium. January 14th 1997, with comments by Larry Parks, http://www.gold-eagle.com/gold_digest/milhouse831.html

The Federal Reserve System was actually established by deception (now, what a surprise!). A bill was sneaked through Congress on Christmas Eve, 1913, when most congressmen were already home for the seasonal holiday and therefore unable to oppose it. The whole conspiracy was orchestrated by a corrupt congressman called Nelson Aldrich, who was in the pocket of the bankers, being a son in law of one of the Rothschild dynasty's most powerful members. As this web site grows, a page will be added giving full details of how this was done. Watch out for this - it's sheer dynamite!
